INFORMATION FOR AUTHORS

I. Submitted manuscripts should comply with the following requirements and conditions:

1. All publications in the journal are free of charge. The submitted manuscript should be written in Russian or in English. If the article is written in Russian, the abstract and keywords should be given both in Russian and in English. The title page should contain the UDC number, the full name of the author(s) and the title of the article.

2. The manuscript should be of normal journal article length (say, between 7,000 and 10,000 words) and should be accompanied by abstract (100–200 words) and key words (10 words or phrases). Abstract should include the following information in a concise form: a) subject and aim (objectives), hypothesis; b) method (methodology); c) results (conclusions) and their theoretical or/and practical significance; d) sphere of application of results obtained.

3. Information about the author(s) at the end of the article should include: full name, scientific qualification (post-graduate, PhD, Doctor of Science, etc., scientific degree and title, number of publications, grants received); current job/employment; scientific interests; contact details (telephone numbers, e-mail address). The author should also state his (her) h-index (Scopus or WoS), Researcher ID and SPIN codes.

To indicate that you have complied with our ethics in publishing, please include the following statement: “The article (title, author(s)) is original, has never published before and has never been submitted to any other journal(s) or publisher(s). The author has checked the manuscript for improper or inaccurate citation (plagiarism). The author consents to publication of the paper in the journal (including electronically)”.

When preparing the manuscript for submission the author may find it useful to consult articles published earlier, which are available at <http://vestnik.spbu.ru/ENG/s05.html>.

The manuscript should be submitted as a separate Word or RTF file saved on an electronic storage device or sent by e-mail. If sent by e-mail the authors are strongly recommended to use the ZIP format.

II. Requirements to the content and structure of the manuscript

1. The submitted manuscript should be original and have never been published in any other journal(s) or book(s). The article should create essentially new knowledge as compared to the available scientific literature on the subject (except for textbooks or reference materials). It should clearly demonstrate the author's profound knowledge of the views of the mainstream scholars within the field, including those earlier published in the St Petersburg University Journal of Economic Studies. Preference is given to the articles of (a) scientific and (b) analytical character.

2. The authors should use the following formal structure of the paper:

- Introduction (stating the problem, identifying its importance in the contemporary Russian and international economic theory and practice).

- Main part of the article (original research including the review of existing publications on this subject, historical overview, evolution of the scientific approaches within the field, substantiation of the research instruments, primary empirical data, qualitative and (or) quantitative modeling, secondary data processing, etc.). It is recommended to use clear structure and divide the main body into sections with headings and subheadings or use numbered sections.

- Conclusions: discussion and implications, presentation of results and findings corresponding to the goals and aims set forth in the introduction, sphere of application, limitations or directions for future research.

- Acknowledgments (if applicable)

References should be presented in the form of bibliographical entries in alphabetical order, unnumbered. They should include only those publications that are referred to in the article. References should demonstrate author's awareness of current research and include current publications both in Russia and abroad. The list of references should consist of no less than 15 sources, 30% of which must be foreign publications. Self-citing should not be more than 15%.

References should be provided in the following order: Russian; Foreign.

References to Internet resources (except copyrighted articles and monographs), juridical documents (decisions, laws, regulations on the activity of legal institutions/persons and individuals) and archives should be made in the text of the publication in the form of footnotes.

References inside the text should have square brackets: [Ivanov, 1995]. If in process of quotation a specific phrase/statement, formula, theorem is mentioned, a number of the page in the original source should be provided: [Ivanov, 1995, p. 23]. If more than one publication of a certain author is used in the text, after the year of publishing a letter in Cyrillic alphabet showing the order of the cited publication in the list of references should be provided: [Ivanov, 1995a, p. 23].

All Russian sources should be first transliterated using Latin letters in round brackets after the name of the source in Russian and then followed by the translation in English.

3. Authors who wish to include mathematics shall do so only when it does not compromise realistic analysis. In such cases, the main steps in the development of argument, findings and conclusions should be made intelligible to a non-mathematical reader. The mathematical part of the argument should be enclosed as appendix.

4. Page layout:

- The printing fields 25 mm;
- Font size 12;
- Page numbers provided;
- Correct shape and positioning of pictures, tables and formulas;
- No colored pictures are allowed;
- All the explanations and comments should be made in footnotes on each page.

III. Reviewing procedure

1. All manuscripts (scientific articles, bibliographic and dissertation reviews, etc.) submitted for publication in the Journal are subject to a three-stage quality control procedure:

- a) formal review;
- b) preliminary review;
- c) substantial review (anonymous).

More detailed information about reviewing procedure is provided in the Provisions for reviewing manuscripts submitted for publishing in the St Petersburg University Journal of Economic Studies.

2. All remarks made by the reviewer are forwarded to the author for consideration. The author shall respond to these comments point by point and present both the reviewed version of the article and a list of responses.

3. The decision for acceptance (stating the date of issue)/rejection/return for the revision is taken by the chief editor following discussion of the current edition of the journal at the editorial board meeting and communicated to the author no later than 60 days after receipt of the manuscript.
