

Vestnik of St. Petersburg State University is journal of science and theory drawing together the results of researchers as well as informing the scientific community of developments in research and theory at St. Petersburg State University. Active discussions of the engaging issues in science and the humanities as well as of the general academic and research process are covered in its pages.

Along with original articles and critical reviews, this publication also provides a systematic account of the scientific vibrancy of the university. It acquaints readers with various aspects of the university's history and the life and times of its renowned researchers.

A special section is devoted to reviewing current research work. The reader can receive the very latest information regarding new scientific publications.

Vestnik of St. Petersburg State University engages with the central, principal, and current issues of science and the humanities. Vestnik is open to collaboration with Russian as well as foreign researchers, scientific cooperatives as well as academic and research institutions.

Series 14 of Vestnik of St. Petersburg State University can be found in the listing of the principal peer-reviewed research journals and publications which, as recommended by the expert advisory council of VAK (the Higher Attestation Commission of the Russian Federation's Ministry of Education and Science), may be employed in the defence of doctoral and post-doctoral dissertations under the specialty: 12.00.00 Legal Science.

The journal Vestnik Series 14, Law publishes articles in the following fields: theory and history of law and state, philosophy of law, history of the law and the Russian state, history of the law and state of foreign countries, constitutional law, law of finance, international law, civil law and arbitration, etc.

Vestnik Series 14 regularly informs its readers of scientific conferences which have taken place in the department, as well as printing reviews of the work published by its researchers.

The Journal also has a section 'Dissertations in Progress' in which graduate, post graduate students and applicants of the St. Petersburg State University Faculty of Law may present summaries of their research work.